WHERE THE BEST TEA GROWS

Priests of Buddhist Temple Are Said to Grow the Most Superior Article of the Kind.

The best tea in all China, and therefore in all the world, grows on top of a small mountain in western Szechuan, called Ming Shan, and is cultivated by the priests of the Buddhist temple on its summit. Tradition says that a Chinese pilgrim brought the seeds from India centuries ago. There are only a few pounds in each crop, and these have always gone as a tribute to Peking for the use of the imperial household. Who will get the precious tea now? Will it be reserved for the family of the president of the republic, or will it be scattered among those who are willing to pay a big price for such a luxury?

There is a saying in China, that to make a perfect cup of tea you must take leaves from Ming Shan and water from the Yangtze. No one supposed the actual turbid river water to be meant, but no one could explain the proverb until De Rosthorn, who wrote an interesting treatise on Chinese tea, solved the problem, or thought he did.

De Rosthorn was once crossing the Yangtze near its mouth, at Chen-Kiang, when he saw some men in a boat, dipping water into buckets. He inquired why they did that, and was told that at the bottom of the bay there was a spring, remembered since the time when the present river bed was dry land, and that this spring water was highly esteemed in cookery. Here, then, he concluded, he had found that special water of the Yangtze which, with Ming Shan leaves, made the best cup of tea in the world.—Youth's Companion.

HORSE GOES FOR OWN SHOES

Big Ben Leaves Pasture, Deciding It Was High Time to Get Shod.

Gilbert A. Penney of Quogue turned his favorite horse, Big Ben, out to pasture last summer, went off cruising in his power boat and forgot until a few days ago that he had pulled his horse's shoes off before turning him out to graze, and that it was time to have him reshoed for the winter, says the New York Tribune. So he was surprised when Timothy Skidmore, the village blacksmith at Good Ground, Long Island, several miles away, called him up on the telephone.

"Your horse is shod and is all ready for you," said Skidmore.

"What are you talking about?" demanded Penney.

"Why, Big Ben, your horse, walked in here today and got in line with the other horses being shod. I thought it was funny that nobody was with him, but I've got him all shod."

Then it developed, according to unofficial affidavits, that Big Ben had escaped from his pasture and, deciding it was time for his new winter shoes, trudged to Good Ground and walked into the blacksmith shop.

NO OCCASION FOR WORRY.

"Well, don't worry; they'd have ample time to rescue you."—Life.

WHY HE WORRIED.

"Station master, can you give me any news about that rumored wreck? This suspense is awful."

"Wife on the train?"

"No, but I had a crate of eggs aboard."

HARD TO FOLLOW.

"What do you know about that habeas corpus case?"

"I'm entirely lost. I don't even know what the plural of 'habeas corpus' is."

GOOD PROSPECTS.

"Your teeth are in pretty bad condition," said the dentist.

"They must be," sighed the patient. "You look so happy."

KEEN EARS.

"Can you hear the rustling of the trees?"

"Yes; I can even hear the dog-wood's bark."

FLAT LIFE.

"Another young couple have started intensive housekeeping."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Three rooms and a bath."
